A TRUNK FULL.

A Young Man Arrested for Removing and Selling Goods Without Making Proper Returns.

Yesterday morning a young man working in the St. Louis Store was arrested by officer Cooper at his room, for larceny of goods from the store. In consideration of his youth and family his name is omitted. About a year ago he came to this city with good recommendations and was employed by Mr. B. C. Evans, the proprietor, as a clerk there. Great confidence was placed in him and he seemed to deserve it by his behavior. About three months ago some articles were missed that it was known had not been sold. Other articles were missed, and as this clerk was seen to be spending more money on various pleasures, as well as necessities, he was suspected. A lookout was kept, but it was not easy to catch him. Two silk patterns that were missed were known to be in the family of Mr. Louis A. Trapet, and no money had been received for them. A few nights ago Mr. Trapet obtained some sheeting at the store, for which no money was taken in and no charge made on the books. Yesterday morning the clerk, when arrested at his room, made an acknowledgment and threw open his trunk, in which were found two silk patterns, and various articles for ladies. He said he would not mind serving ten years in the penitentiary to keep his mother from knowing of his crime. He charged that Louis Trapet had persuaded him to steal by telling him his salary was too small and he could add to it by taking things from the store and selling to him at cost. He could give no bond and was locked up after an interview with an attorney, Mr. Henry Furman.

Mr. Trapet was arrested on the charge of receiving stolen goods and at once procured a bond and was released. In conversation he told the reporter that the young man had run up a large bill there, and he got afraid him that he had the money, but he could not get anything he wanted at cost from the store and have it charged to his own account. He did bring him two silk dress patterns and some smaller articles. He came and got $19 on the silk patterns a few days ago, and that left him owing something again. The sheeting got the other night was obtained in the presence of another clerk and was directed to be charged.

Mr. Trapet has many friends here where he has established himself in confidence, and these will rejoice to see him come out of the matter with entirely clean skirts.

IN BRIEF.

Candy at Capera's.

It is a poor clock that will only run one week without being wound (?)

The clock on the tower is waiting to take a fresh start at the beginning of the new year.

Do you intend to let the children go without candy? Not if Capera & Bro. can supply it.

What is Christmas without candy? Fruit? No! Almost nothing. See Capera & Bro. about it.

The shooting match will come off on the grounds of the club just across the river, on the 27th and 28th.

The chicken fighting during the week will be immense. A large number of fine chickens are on hand.

The spirit of the dead old man in the tower was sighing through the breeze last night at the delay in fixing his time-piece.

Don't forget the grand shooting match to come off on the 27th and 28th day of December under the auspices of the Fort Worth Gun Club.

Over a thousand pigeons have been secured for the meeting of the gun club. Representative shots from all over the state will be here.

The turbine contest is being arranged on paper by a fiery correspondent. Mulehead bovines of the gentler sex will be substituted for the animal used in Spain.

The three tramps arrested by Officer Croger Friday, for the Whitesboro robbery, broke out of the "boose that night and have skeddaddled to a milder climate than this.

J. D. Macdon of Mansfield, in this county, Saturday sold R. Mackin of this city one hog weighing 722 pounds gross. The hog is about two years old and was raised by Mr. Macdon.

A general complaint here at the sanitary condition of various premises. The city council in its benevolent providence would do well to create a sanitary inspector and back him up with proper legislation as is done in all large cities.

Street Work.

Mr. J. Sphar, contractor, received a telegram last night stating that his bid for the work of paving Front street from Houston to Main street across the railroad reservation had been accepted. Mr. Sphar will give the necessary bond to-day and the work will be commenced at once. The work will be similar to that on Main and Houston streets.

"BLIGHTED HOPES."

Suit Against a Newspaper for Ten Thousand Dollars.

An Innocent Young Man Charged with Being a Poet.

He Claims that his Base Ball Prospects Have Been Annihilated.

(Memphis Avalanche.)

Mr. Henry Craft, Jr., yesterday through his attorneys instituted a suit in the circuit court against the Appeal for $10,000 damages, the ground for the suit being recent libelous articles in the "Old Reliable" which have injured the young man's base ball prospects forever. The following is a text of the bill:

Henry Craft, Jr., vs. The Appeal newspaper, etc., before Hon. J. D. Pierce, etc., etc. Your complainant, Henry Craft, alleges that on the 16th of December, 1884, a libelous article or editorial appeared in the columns of the said Memphis Appeal, reflecting upon the complainant and damaging his fair name and fame. Said article is made a part hereof and filed herewith, but more specifically does contain a willful and malicious attack upon the complainant's base ball prospects, and the following paragraph:

"THE EXCENDIARY PARAGRAPH."

"We congratulate our young friend Craft on his creative, inventive genius, his idealism and his romance. But we regret to see his corrugations shining out like a brilliant meteor through the murky clouds of a dark and dismal melancholy. His little person is a wall of despair. But even in this he shows the first prerequisites for a great poet, for Burns lived on sorrow and Cowper, paradoxical as it may seem, was miserable unless he was unhappy. Even at the age of 17 Byron was so sad and melancholy that he wrote:

"Oh! memory torture me no more, The present's all I crave; My hopes of future bliss are o'er, My heart is in the past."

"Byron gave way to sadness, melancholy and melancholy before it became him. He had not suffered and acted enough in the world to be seized with despair, and we hope our friend Craft will rebuild his 'barque' on the ruins of his 'barque' and be a poet and a man. He has a fine field of poetic genius from which he can reap an immortal harvest, and that he possesses that other ingredient necessary to make a poet—melancholy—that he writes:

Complainant further states that the cause of this editorial was a poem entitled "Blighted Hopes," which was WRITTEN SIXTY YEARS AGO and copied in a college paper, of which he is editor. He denies that he ever wrote the poem.

He denies that he possesses creative, inventive genius, idealism and romance. He states that he is a truth-telling, well-behaved boy, and never did anything mean in his life. He denies that his corrugations shine out like a brilliant meteor through the murky clouds of a dark and dismal melancholy. He states that he is enjoying good health and never had any "corrugations" in his life. He admits that he had the measles and mumps when he was a child, but says his appetite is now excellent and he can eat any man in his class. He states that he never met Burns, Cowper or Byron, and could not have composed the poem alleged. That the effort to couple him with persons with whom he is unacquainted is taking an unfair advantage of him. He denies that he ought to rebuild his "barque," because

HE NEVER HAD A "BARQUE," and wouldn't know what to do with one if he did. He denies that his heart is "passion-litigated," and is only proof thereof states that he is only eighteen years old, and is only a base ball player. He states that this effort to drag his heart in the question is an unworthy device to induce him to tell whether his sweetheart has gone back on him. He states that he has no desire to achieve greatness as a poet, as it would materially impair his usefulness in a game of football. Com-plaintiff further states that he has no fertile field of poetical genius, from which to reap an immortal harvest. It is his intention to become a lawyer, and not a farmer. He denies that he possesses

THE OTHER INGREDIENT necessary to a poet—melancholy despair. He states that he does not drink or chew tobacco, and never lost his money on poker, and that he has always tried to behave himself; that it is not enough to accuse him of despair, but to charge him with melancholy despair is like kicking a man when he is down, as he never heard of despair that was not melancholy.

Wherefore, complainant claims that his reputation has been damaged to the extent of $10,000 in the eyes of his classmates and the public generally. He prays for all other proper and equitable and proper relief.

ON THE BRIDAL TOUR.

What a Conductor Says About Brides and Grooms.

(Philadelphia Record.)

"Can I generally tell a bride and groom when I see them on a train? Can I? Well, I should rather say so. I haven't been running a Pullman-car five years and not learned that 'little trick' and the parlor-car conductor who made the above remarks tilted back in his chair in the reading-room at the Broad street station yesterday afternoon and chuckled softly to himself, as he blew a cloud of cigar-smoke into the air and gazed at it as though he saw there visions of young married couples on their travels.

"Yes, sir," he continued, after two or three vigorous puffs. "It must be a pretty sharp pair that can fool me when they're on their wedding journey, though about half of 'em play their little game very nicely, and the rest of the rascals don't tumble to the situation at all. Of course there are different sorts of brides and grooms, just as much as there are different sorts of other people; but I have found that as a rule the brides don't care to be taken as very nicely, and the rest of the rascals don't tumble to the situation at all.
